

ACCIDENT AT WORK – GMB SAYS DON'T BLAME THE VICTIM

Are you worried about accidents in your ASDA workplace? GMB is.

GMB is negotiating with ASDA to establish independent health & safety committees. Until that time GMB will continue to act in the best interests of our members and refer all workplace accidents to our independent solicitors to assess the merits and deal with accordingly.

GMB believes that the best way to cut accidents at ASDA is to have dedicated safety committees to identify and act on health and safety problems, as defined under the Health & Safety at Work Act. ASDA insist that health and safety issues must be discussed within in the ASDA Colleague Circle, a forum that is actively blocking a move to independent health and safety committees.

GMB, the recognised trade union for ASDA workers, has won over £1.8 million over the last 5 years for our members in ASDA. With more than 200 claims always outstanding this could see the amount of compensation recovered by GMB rise to over £2 million.

GMB regards all matters concerning the health, safety and welfare of our members as a priority in any workplace. ASDA is no exception, as the record of Personal Injury (PI) compensation recovery shows.

In one of our responses to the company's proposed revisions to the colleague handbook GMB challenged the company's proposals regarding accidents at work, as it implied that most workplace accidents are caused by "careless workers".

GMB will not tolerate this 'blame the victim' theory, neither will the watchdog body the Health & Safety Executive (HSE). This could be why ASDA did not respond to the instruction by the Government and the Health And Safety Commission (HSC) in 2001 to include their Health & Safety record in their annual report, which would identify the following:

- An outline of the company's health and safety policy
- The company's health and safety goals/targets, which should be measurable and relate to the health and safety policy
- Details of progress towards achieving goals/targets
- The strategies and systems in place for controlling those risks

In the meantime, if you are injured at work make sure that the details of your accident are recorded in the Accident Book in your store or depot. Tell your GMB Workplace Representative, who will give you a TU 56 form to complete and lodge a claim for PI compensation with GMB. This is a free service as part of your membership.
